kt took years OP to develop the new gold backed system going thru the Brics initially.

Whatever base currency emerges, it'll still need efficient economic engines at ground level to make sure it hits the streets properly.

Basket of currency

10 strongest fiat

10 strongest commodities

All digital assets / crypto are interchangeable using the claimable balance option in "transactions" (within the apps)

Decentralized

Fun stuff

The returns claimed by the users will be the advertising. The revolution will not be televised

That's a step in the right direction.

The more we decentralize currencies, the less chance there is of federal control.

But it really needs to be televised. Having the media on our side will speed up the process 100fold.

Still, the base currency is only 20% of the full equation.

I'm also worried about cashless apps being used to imprison humanity. A true new system needs to work independently of digital apps.

3 Sovereignties

Water Sovereignty

Food sovereignty

Energy sovereignty

What if you could provide half your food, all your drinking water, half your washing water, and half your energy from your own house?

That's a realistic 2-5 year goal.

In ten years, with the right equipment, we could aspire to provide all our water, food and energy from our house and neighbourhood.

If we could provide more basics for ourselves, The Rat Race would dissolve. The chase for fiat would slow, and then stop. We could start to build a planet of Islands and Festivals.

The base currency of this world is not fiat, nor even gold or silver;

It is human ingenuity, energy, and trust.

Further to that, the basic household items of food, water, and energy are themselves a type of currency.

The more of these basics we can provide onsite, the less we need to chase promissory ghost notes.

Re: How could a New Financial Network be Rapidly Deployed and Scaled?

I'm not tricking humanity onto a cashless system.

You're advised to cease and desist with the cashless LARP.

Gold, Silver and other metals-backed currencies look interesting.

Crypto is fine, but only if it had a physical coin representing it.

Crypto can be decoupled from cashless payments... Crypto and cashless are not the same.

You could use crypto as a store of value, and physical tokens to trade.

There is plenty of local currency/time-banking expertise on Earth. Literally hundreds of systems, all of which have been snubbed by the MSM.

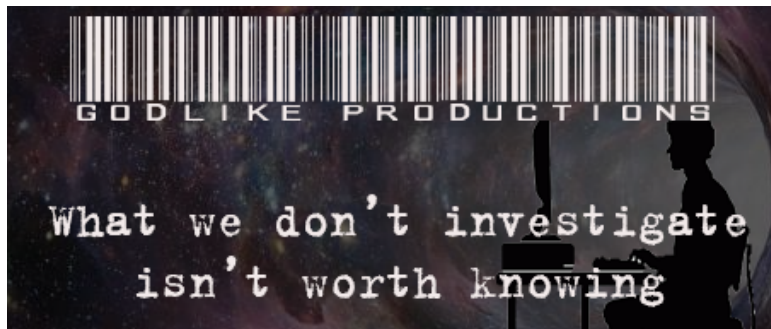

If no one listens, I will just go live in the Himalayas and ignore everyone.
