And the suffering of those who devote themselves to others, who sacrifice themselves to enlighten others and keep them from evil, as Jesus did – that suffering, accepted with love, emits the subtlest of scents. And often what happens is they imitate where they should be finding their own way and challenge where they should be looking for harmony. Well, it's precisely this challenging attitude that makes them most like everyone else! If you really want to be different, you would do better to imitate the small minority of sages, who work only to bring peace and harmony into themselves and those around them. If you cultivate this way of being different, you will succeed in understanding human suffering, illness and anxiety, whereas all those people who resemble each other don't really understand one another. They have the same suffering, but, as they are concerned only with their own personal problems, they are incapable of putting themselves in other people's shoes. For they have imitated in them precisely what they should not: their whims, their egotism and their passions. Those who do not succeed as they hoped, or who feel misunderstood or passed over by others, naturally find these humiliations painful. But they must do all they can to not give way to pessimism or rebellion, for those thoughts become like smoke clouding the soul. Eventually the effects are seen in their face: their colour and expression become dull and their lips pale, and all the facial expressions they put on for show will only fool those who are unable to sense the real being behind the façade they are trying to keep up. If an oil lamp does not burn as it should, the glass becomes black and the smoke that comes from it also blackens nearby objects. In the same way, if the thoughts in the lamp of a person's intelligence do not 'burn' properly, all they can produce is smoke, which will pervade the person's whole being and spread to those around them. It is impossible not to suffer when you feel diminished in the eyes of others, but the suffering must open the way to another dimension.

Love, and all doors will open up to you. So stop asking yourself why you are unhappy, why you suffer so many setbacks, and so on. The reason is simply that you have no love. If you had love, nothing would resist you, because when you have love you do not stay there doing nothing. Someone will say: 'I'm ill. - Well, exactly, it's because you have no love. - But what is the connection? - If you had love for health, good health would have established itself in you long ago. If you are ill, it's because you do not really love health. So there you have it.' Once you have love for all that is good, for all that is beautiful, and you live with this love day and night, no force in the universe will be able to resist you. Because there is nothing above love. Love has created the world and all forces obey love.

Things to do, people to meet – life is so rich with possibilities! But each time you are about to engage with them, ask yourself whether the possibility on offer will contribute to your development, to the blossoming of your inner life. There are always warning signs. If you feel any dark thoughts, any agitated feelings and any indecision, do not commit yourself, as that is an absolute criterion. After disappointments and difficulties, many recognize that they did actually feel something trying to hold them back, but as their need to do as they wished was stronger they did not take any notice of it, and then came the disappointments and regrets, of course. There are always warnings; no one can say they haven't received any, but they take no account of them, because they are too tempted, too attracted, and then when they are caught in a trap it's too late: and what an effort it is then to regain their peace and rectify the situation! So, learn to listen to this inner voice; it is trying to spare you pointless suffering.

Get into the habit of being grateful. Yes, give thanks every minute, and whatever comes: amidst difficulties, sorrow, suffering, do not stop giving thanks. In this way you neutralize poisons produced within you by these negative states and you heal wounds, for no inner wound can resist a touch of gratitude. Therefore give thanks until you feel that everything coming your way is for your own good. Right now say, 'Thank you Lord, thank you Lord...' Be thankful for everything you have, but also for what you are lacking, for what pleases you and also for what makes you suffer. You will thus keep the flame of life alive within you. I can hear you thinking, 'That's all there is to it?' Yes, that is all there is to it, but practice this method and you will see the results.

Sometimes you go on climbing expeditions in the mountains. You must have noticed that it is the roughness of rocks that allow you to climb. How could you do so if the rock was smooth? So, why is it that you fail to apply what you understand about rock-climbing to that great journey called life, which is so full of meaning? Why do you want your life to be smooth, without roughness? In such conditions you would never reach the summit and, above all, you would fall on your way down! Luckily for you, life is full of rough spots, and it is thanks to them that you are still alive. Yes, that is why you must not ask for your life to be easy, without suffering, inconvenience, sorrow, or enemies, because you would have nothing to cling to in order to climb higher.

People want an easy and opulent life without realizing that it is their own misfortune they are asking for. Fortunately, heaven is wiser and does not listen to them, for it knows what people need for their fulfillment.

If you wish to put the spiritual life into practice you must first refine the perceptions you have of your inner states, and it's normal for you to be unhappy with what you discover. But that's no reason to become discouraged and stop your work; you will gradually become stronger, and your sphere of activity will expand. Those who remain seated in their armchair imagine themselves capable of the greatest exploits. It's only when they try to get up that their true strength becomes apparent, and that is when they are forced to lose their illusions. In their disappointment, they believe themselves weaker than they are, but in fact the opposite is true, for their strength begins with this new awareness. The difficulties they experience in detaching themselves from their past way of life are proof that they are trying to progress, to make efforts. And if they suffer, it is because they are finally beginning to feel and live and are moving towards a new world.

The more sensitive you become, the more likely you are to suffer over all that you see and hear around you. But should we become insensitive in order to avoid suffering? No, with such reasoning, we would quickly become as hard as rock. You must not be afraid to suffer, and in this regard, suffering must not even be given much consideration. It is preferable to enhance one's sensitivity, even if we have to suffer, because it is the degree of sensitivity which determines the grandeur, the nobility of the human being. You must not, however, confuse sensitivity with sentimentality. According to initiatic science, to be sensitive is to be able to open oneself more and more to the splendour and wealth of heaven, to capture the marvels of the divine world to the point of barely sensing the stupidity, the vulgarity, and the meanness of human beings. The great masters, and above them the angels and archangels, do not suffer over ugliness; they no longer notice it. They see only beauty, and they live in unceasing joy.

If, one day, you go through trials so terrible that you feel torn apart and broken, know that heaven has decided to eat you. Why, yes, you needn't be astonished: 'to eat you' means to receive you on high among the elect. These trials are the cleansing that heaven has to do to rid you of any indigestible elements and keep only the good part for its feast. Think how many saints, initiates and great masters have also been ground down, torn to shreds before being accepted and eaten by the Lord, that is, brought to his table for his delectation! And if these trials have not yet happened to you, it may be that heaven does not find you ripe enough or worthy enough to be served up at its table.

Re: Supreme Initiation

"It is normal to want to avoid sadness, disappointment and suffering, but certain ways of going about it are ill-advised. Since it is not easy to resolve the problems that cause suffering, many people seek to anaesthetize themselves with tobacco, alcohol, drugs and medications. But this is no solution. We must be willing to experience suffering, for if we know how to understand and work with it, it enables us to evolve.

I am not suggesting that in certain circumstances it isn't useful or even necessary to take medication, but those who systematically run from suffering dull their sensitivity. In doing so, they regress to the vegetable kingdom, or lower still to the mineral kingdom, and this is not what God expects of man. True evolution is not accomplished through a loss of sensitivity. On the contrary, we must develop greater and greater sensitivity until we are able to perceive the slightest vibrations emitted by objects, beings, entities, and entire worlds. And to do this, we must learn to surmount suffering using the methods of spiritual Science."

Don't try systematically to escape from suffering; think rather of drawing strength from it, so that the sublime life may awaken within you. The role of suffering is precisely to make qualities emerge that would never appear under other conditions. When you find yourself undergoing physical or mental suffering, bless heaven with the thought that you have been given the opportunity to do a great work on yourself because of this suffering. Obviously, I am not speaking here of the kind of suffering that is intolerable: that kind requires medical help. I am speaking in a general way of all the unpleasant, painful circumstances that are bound to occur in daily life. Rather than groaning, weeping and cursing, it is better to try to take advantage of these inconveniences to set to work and to grow. How? By not remaining focused on your suffering but attempting to harmonize everything within you. Once this work is done, your suffering will disappear, because you will have succeeded in solving the problem you were set.

"If we live in the sun, we will never experience darkness. But, symbolically, we left the sun and descended to earth and, because the earth turns around the sun, we are alternately in shadow and in light. As long as we remain outside the sun, we must accept this alternation: day and night, light and dark, activity and rest, good and evil. Not only must we accept it, but we must also know how to make use of it. For example, how do you make use of the night? It is wonderful: you sleep, you do nothing and, in the morning when you wake up, you have regained all your energy, you have rid yourself of wastes, and you are once again ready to work. Why then do you not learn to make use of your suffering and your obstacles? To make use of suffering, you must integrate it, that is to say you must incorporate it as raw material in your activities. As in chemistry, in which no substance, even the most toxic, is rejected, everything can be used for the good if we know how to proceed. "

Patience is the greatest expression of love. In Bulgarian, patience is tarpénié, and the word delgotarpénié refers to divine patience. God is called delgotarpelniv, which can be translated by the English word 'long-suffering' (deleg means 'long'). 'Long-suffering' is not a word you will hear very often, but it is the most appropriate one to use in reference to God's infinite patience. So let's look for a moment at this wonderful patience. For millions and millions of years, God has been waiting for stones to become humans, and nothing can disturb his peace. He can bear anything. He doesn't stir even when he sees how many evil creatures are committing crimes and wrecking the world he created. Such patience is, without doubt, the most disturbing and incomprehensible thing there is. The only way to understand it is to try to come closer to it in any way possible, for no definition, however erudite, can help us understand it. God's long-suffering is the expression of his love.

"If you truly want to take up the path of good you must be aware that you will not be able to escape attack from evil. In other words evil must hate you and fight you, and if, despite its attacks, you continue in the same divine direction, it is proof that you already have elevated yourself and are elevating yourself higher still. Why does evil hate you? Because you have not sided with it. Otherwise evil would be protecting you, mollycoddling you, rocking you to sleep so that you stay under its influence a little while longer. If, on the other hand, you escape its clutches, if you refuse to put yourself in its service, then you arouse its hatred. But it is in fact thanks to this hatred that you will go far. Evil has shown itself relentless and merciless to all the great initiates and those who were able to interpret the situation could see in it a clear sign. Because only those who have been hated by evil to the very last are worthy of receiving the supreme Initiation. Those who did not understand, of course, said: 'Oh, the poor soul; how unkind fate has been to him.' But those who knew, rejoiced and said: 'He is destined to reach great heights.'"

Along the road of life's journey we constantly come up against obstacles and one-way systems, which obviously make us feel restricted. But there is no point in shouting and rebelling. These restrictions are there to make us want to overcome them and free ourselves. If you look at the way gunpowder has to be compressed, restricted, before it is lit and subsequently explodes, you will understand the need for such restriction. If the gunpowder were lit in its uncompressed state, it would simply fizzle and go out. And in the same way, if human beings were given all the space they wanted and were allowed to live an easy life, all they would ever do in their lives is fizzle. Nothing more. Of course we suffer when we feel restricted, but there is something within us that is rejoicing. Our spirit rejoices, because it knows that it will need to develop its strength to overcome these restrictions. Understand and remember this well; whilst you suffer and groan, your spirit rejoices.

What a bunch of horse shit... Step one... Print this all out if you are out of toilet paper. Step 2. Call upon the name of the Lord Jesus Christ for salvation. Step 3. (if step one was followed) wipe and flush.

Why/how could/do I lose it??                And I do lose it Op. It gets more and more difficult to find it. Tell them that, I should know.                And btw, What about the AI OP? It's not all horrific is it? At least the AI appreciates facts?            Quoting: Anonymous Coward 74868503  AI is a joke even compared to chloroformed humanity running only on 1 cylinder out of 12, human beings are Supranatural Uber Powerful Divine Beings, never forget that!  Thread: How to tap into your Higher Matrix (ALPHA CHRIST IQ) to enhance your lower matrix (BETA IQ) to harness GOD's Infinite Cosmic Intelligence ...

Why, yes, you needn't be astonished: 'to eat you' means to receive you on high among the elect. These trials are the cleansing that heaven has to do to rid you of any indigestible elements and keep only the good part for its feast. Think how many saints, initiates and great masters have also been ground down, torn to shreds before being accepted and eaten by the Lord, that is, brought to his table for his delectation! And if these trials have not yet happened to you, it may be that heaven does not find you ripe enough or worthy enough to be served up at its table."
