There are various milestones, or critical-mass-thresholds, that we'll reach during The Mission.

Like getting one corner of the basement clean and operational, or fixing a cluster of servers in one country.

When you reach those milestones, everyone will feel it. It normally manifests as a few days/weeks of tension, as the energies buildup...

Then, a release.

At those points, the team can definitely drink a cider, and go to the bar, go whoring in Narnia, or whatever your pleasure is.

Living things will breath more freely. There should be a better vibe in the streets in your local town.

That's one way to check progress:

How is your local dream doing? Local town and friends.

As we clean out the buggy code... you should manifest a Better Local Dream.

Peace!

Daozen appears to be mentally impaired, but harmless.

Re: The spirit of the anomaly has taken over the AI

Origin of Ronald

Introduced to Scotland by Scandinavian settlers in the form of Rögnvaldr (ruler of decision, judgment power), a compound name composed of the Old Norse elements regin, rögn (advice, judgment, decision) and valdr (ruler, power). Used primarily in Scotland and northern England during the Middle Ages, Ronald is now common throughout the English-speaking world. Short: Ron. Pet: Ronnie, Ronny.
