Do they worship Saturn because the simulation is being broadcasted from there?

Do they worship Saturn because the simulation is being broadcasted from there?

We are trapped in the cube time loop. This is the best theory I've heard so far.

Imagine this whole time the planets were super advanced machines tasked with keeping this simulation together and operating.

Saturn definitely has meaning. I'm not sure yet what it is.

	Seems to me saturn used to be much closer to earth. Not sure if it was a 2nd sun like some say. I dunno. What is weird is how they could know so much about it so long ago. The only way that seems possible is if at some point it was closer or we were given info or we had higher tech and lost it somehow. broadcasted from there?

Saturn is a chained entity... the titan Kronos.

Azazel.

They worship the black goat, the black sun.

He has shown you, o man, what is good. And what does the Lord ask of you, but to do justice, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly before your God?

A portal in/out of this solar system or dimension?

IN "2001 a space odyssey " they replaced Saturn with Jupiter. Davis Bowman went through the portal, then back as a "star child."

The guy that wrote the song said he heard a news anchor say something that sounded like "black hole sun". So he wrote that phrase down and then tried to come up with other cool sounding phrases that had a paradoxical feeling to them. The song literally means nothing. Its words that sound cool together.

Jehovah. Leviathan. The Lord of the Rings. The Master Craftsman. Ouroboros. The God of this world. The Demiurge. Satan. All one and the same. Not an evil God, but a blind one who does not recognise the true God of the Cosmos and wishes to keep his creations bound to Earth. There exists an ancient race of people who serve him for this purpose.

Now for the plot twist: the Serpent (of Wisdom) was actually the hero in the Garden of Eden, as he sought to liberate humanity from the pointless birth\suffering\death cycle.

Visit to Venus by T. Lobsang Rampa
This short excerpt from My Visit to Venus by T. Lobsang Rampa corroborates in many ways the relatings in The Voice of Venus so is related herein(THISISACTVIELYBEINGPULLEFROMGLP) venus-visit-3"The evening winds sighed gently through the trees of the Hidden Valley. There was an atmosphere of peace, of harmony, of Beings working for good. We lay by the side of our camp fire, the Lama Mingyar Dondup and three companions, five of us in all. We had journeyed far from Lhasa, from the frozen slopes of mountains and barren land. Now there were but five of us though eleven of us had started out. Our companions had fallen by the wayside, victims of avalanches, victims of privation and of the bitter, freezing cold.

Now, though, in the warmth of this Hidden Valley we lay at peace. Marvels had indeed befallen us since we had first communed with the Gods from other worlds, the Gods who looked after the Earth and kept it from self-destruction. Tonight, we thought, we will retire early. We had earned our sleep, our rest, for throughout the day we had been seeing the secrets of the immense city which was half buried in the glacier. We had learned much but; we were to learn more.

We looked at each other, wondering who was speaking, because a gentle but insistent thought kept coming into our minds. "Brothers, brothers, come this way for we are waiting."

Hesitantly, one after the other, we got to our feet and looked about us. There was no one in sight, but again came the insistent command, "Brothers, this way, we are waiting." So we followed our intuition and made our way to the bustling camp where the machines from other worlds lay, where Beings of many other worlds swarmed about doing their multitudinous tasks. As we approached one of the larger ships a man, the Broad One, descended from it and came to meet us with his hand upon his heart in a gesture of peace and of greeting.

"Ah, brothers, so you have come at last. We have been calling you for the past hour. We thought perhaps that your brains slept."

We bowed humbly before him, bowed to the Superior Being from outer space; he turned and led the way to the vessel. We stood on a certain spot beside the ship; it felt as if we were caught by some strong force and wafted upwards. "Yes," he said to our unspoken thoughts, "that is an anti- gravity beam, a levitator we call it. It saves one climbing."

Inside the vessel he led us to a room with seats along the wall. It was a round room, and it reminded us of the ship in which we had recently had a trip. We looked about, and we could see out as if there were no walls at all, and yet we knew that those walls were as solid as metal, a metal harder than anything we knew.

"My brothers you have traveled far according to your standards, and you have endured much according to any standards. This night we are going to take you far away from your own Earth, we are going to take you to a planet which you call Venus. Take you there just to show you that there are civilizations beyond anything that you know on Earth, take you so that your days of life upon Earth may be brightened by the knowledge of what is, and what can be. First let us eat. You were, as I am aware, about to partake of your evening meal."

He gave a telepathic command, and attendants entered bearing dishes. One went to a wall and pressed various buttons. A section of the floor rose up as a table, and with it appeared seats upon which we could recline in the old fashioned Eastern way, and not be cooped up in the Western style.

Re: Do they worship Saturn because the simulation is being broadcasted from there?

Saturn is the mother star of Earth, and used to be its sun, in a brown dwarf planetary system. Climate was much different on Earth in that time, as it was englobed in Saturn's warm and humid plasma sheath, there was a global tropical climate allowing the growth of gigantic plants and animals. Traditions the world over remember that world and its cataclysmic disappearance, when that star system was captured by our current sun, causing huge energy rebalance, that ultimately precipitated the waters of Saturn on its enclosed planets, causing the biblical flood. Part of that water is still there, in its rings, and the biggest planets of Saturn, Earth, Mars and Venus, were captured to orbit our current sun.

Wal Thornhill from the Thunderbolts projects, among others, has proved extensively that theory, but of course this is heretic knowledge for academia, that want to keep us in the dark playing around with black holes and dark matter.

Wal Thornhill: The Saturn/Earth Connection a...

Saturn, the fallen star, stripped from its light-making ability, became symbolic for Lucifer/Satan, the fallen light bearer, stripped from its angelic glory. So in a nutshell Saturn worship is simply one of many faces of Satan's worship.
