But it wouldn't be fun for us.

Maybe we don't want to play cyberpunk-hacker-cold warz with you any more.

Maybe we want to play Ukulele in a Garden in The Shire.

So I guess this is The Great Separation, right?

Each to his own.

Assembly cannot be forced, right?

Each soul group needs to go its separate way, and associate voluntarily with other groups.

We all need a break from each other.

Want to get vaxxed? Sure. go ahead, in your space only.

Want unvaxxed? Alright... make a separate zone.

It's not working being stuffed in here together like this

The EArth experiment has not failed, but as some do not stop trying to impose their will on others, we must separate for a time.

~O~

Anyway, Im not sure of the specifics of what you mean... Im sure meeting star nations would be fun, providing we can establish mutual trust.

Time to keep on moving on. Try to rebuild again from the ruins while the world roars from the rooftops. The price you pay for not being in the Caruso crowd.

By far the most powerful move is to ignore them.

Then their magic luck kind of fizzles out.

If we tell ourselves: "The world is run by an incredibly powerful secret society" we actually enforce their power in this inception dreamscape.

So yeah. Laugh. Deny. Ignore.

Plenty of groups will arrest them in time.

Our job right now, IMO, is just to drain them of luck.
