How will you eat? What is in your bugout bag?

I am going to Ximending and trap rats...

I heard the Ximen trash is pretty good. I often see people eating it.

Yes, we can root through the trash...

Maybe form some kind of Resistance Movement

HenHaoChi #5 August 8, 2022, 5:24am

I figure Xi will land at Danshui or Keelung...

GuaradianAngel #6 August 8, 2022, 5:28am

I had 2 x 600ml of 18 day Taiwan beer with shitload of taiwanese noodle dishes...I carb overloaded and now I am over my whole Pelosi qq rants...at least most of it, lol.

HenHaoChi #7 August 8, 2022, 5:43am

Pelosi is a wild card to be sure. I wonder if House Fu Manchu managed to talk some sense into her. We should pool the rodent meat and carbs.

Stay Strong.

As long as my cats have food, I'll be fine. I'll survive on homeless people.

What is in your bugout bag?

A handheld M134, motorcycle leathers, and a lil bottle of disinfectant spray.

I'm not overly worried about China specifically at this point. The whole planet seems to going to hell in a handbasket, and China just happen to be one of the biggest players in whatever game is being played.

Too precious to eat cockroaches, tree bark and the homeless, are we?

Anyway, good luck prying my cats from my hands. That's war talk. And not the nice kind.

I am planning to stay around the Danshui area, so I guess ready a sign that says 我是外國人不是台灣人.

Danshui is one of the worst places for them to land. Huge chokepoint getting into Taipei. They'd be picked off as they get into the city.

They don't really have any good options.

The military.

Taipei is relatively well defended.

Mountains on every side. Two chokepoints getting in and out, Daxi and Danshui rivers.

HenHaoChi #17 August 8, 2022, 6:02am

Zhenli Daxue and the Domingo Fort is a coveted strategic location. They could go over the hills to Beitou.

Marco #18 August 8, 2022, 6:02am

I assume you've tried driving tanks over the hills?

GuaradianAngel #19 August 8, 2022, 6:03am

U need to include 我不是美國人...我是外星人。

HenHaoChi #20 August 8, 2022, 6:04am

They might use frogmen to take out Guandu bridge.

Lots of bakeries there.

Taiwan Luthiers #21 August 8, 2022, 6:04am

I don't know, a taibaozheng and go to China and hope for the best. Failing that, a Glock and a bullet for myself.

We could use you as a negotiator...

Can't say I've noticed many gun emplacements, trenches and barriers on the mountains around Taipei. The artillery must be very well camouflaged.

divinecomedy #24 August 8, 2022, 6:08am

And the answer will be 外星人也好美國人也罷都不會說中文。I guess I'll have to pick a nationality that's somewhat "friendly" to China. 我是新加坡人!!

Taiwan Luthiers #25 August 8, 2022, 6:08am

Well if there are gun emplacements, do you honestly think you will see them? You know the trees on those mountains are no less than 30ft tall right? A gun emplacement would about disappear in them. And I'm sure they will have camo netting over it to make it hard or impossible to see. There's a lot of military bases in the mountains by the way.

Better have some RMB at home just to be safe. And a photo of Mao or Xi. Your passport plus those things will make sure that you and your loves ones will get escorted to Taoyuan airport stat.

divinecomedy #33 August 8, 2022, 6:20am

Speaking about battle tactics, In Red Storm Rising, Tom Clancy makes the point that “three men and a jeep” can counter an armored breakthrough. " Three men and a jeep can race along the road, set up, fire one or two missiles, be gone before we can react, then repeat the process a few hundred meters away"

Taiwan and its scooters can make life difficult for the enemy too. Of course they have to show up.

JPMichaels1 #34 August 8, 2022, 6:20am

It's 3-5 years away. They can't take off from their training air craft carrier with loaded planes. Plus they're losing businesses day by day with multinational companies looking elsewhere for manufacturing. The response from this little exercise will cause further economic issues. Compounded on that will be their attempt to open their own iron ore cartel which many have already stated is doomed to fail before it's made a single purchase.

The Chinese economy is collapsing. People are protesting outside banks. The central government has instructed the central bank to prop up unfinished construction projects. And they are continuing with zero Covid strategy because they don't have the infrastructure, meaning hospitals and healthcare facilities, to deal with outbreaks.

This last week was just Xi Jinping throwing a tantrum. And how much has that cost them? Hint it's more than dollars and cents.

Yes.

Expanding on what you said: looking at this through the Trade War lens, which many of the recent events have precipitated from - these live fire exercises are China getting on their hands and knees and begging like they've never begged before to get the US to drop the Tariffs. They are losing money, and spending money – their out of control Chinese rocket's are a perfect metaphor for their economy.

HenHaoChi #38 August 8, 2022, 6:28am

I have to say this is very grounded and accurate...

I can't get behind any timeframes, but your assessment of Xi's economy is on point. His own party have been dissatisfied with him since the anonymous "Comrade Xi" open letter in 2016/2017, which made world news.

His downslide started with the heavy handed tactics in HK, and has continued...

I see it as nothing more than a tantrum too. Plus Reuters looking to drum up some clicks.

Steve4nLanguage #39 August 8, 2022, 6:29am

My long time buddy in the US just asked me this last week, specifically, "Do you have a small stash of supplies in case things do get worse?"

I admitted that I don't really think about it much so I have nothing prepared. Perhaps having a stash of cash (US dollars? Euros?) on hand would be good. I imagine a run on the banks is a real possibility, even if a threat of invasion gets serious.
