Re: If you were The King of The Ring, what would you do?

Well, this world is fallen, corrupt and disgusting. It is diseased, evil and garbage. He doesn't want it. He didn't make the world as it is. I don't want it either. I want nothing to do with it.

Satan has been running this planet. I think of it as more of keys, than anything else. The keys were set on a table and whoever wanted them the most could grab them. They are easy to reach and easy to see. No matter how you use them though, you're going to break it all. Nothing you can do would fix anything, it's not possible. Infinity is too big. It's not ours. I'd just give it back to my father and submit I am not worthy.

Quoting: Anonymous Coward 84790430

No doubt this world is a hot mess.

But many beings are trapped here. So lets build away out for everyone. Else this prison cube could end up infecting all of Creation.

They keys were more given than grabbed.

Of course we can fix things. Most people solved the water, energy and micro-finance issues 10 to 90 years ago. The inventions just haven't reached the mainstream news yet, but they will.

Indian, Chinese, SE Asian, African and South American engineering students are busy fixing things right now.

Only whitey sits there warbling and wringing his hands.

Quoting: Anonymous Coward 84826361

We don't need technology. We can turn stones to bread. We don't need anything at all. That's the beauty of it in the end. Jesus made the way.

All these 'issues' lead to more 'issues' and 'solutions' lead to more 'problems' - perfection in infinity needs none of it - it just is and it's perfect how it is.

It's like starting in a perfect castle, built perfectly not a single flaw, everything is provided for within, everything is absolutely perfect - then - seeing some keys on a table that opens the inner workings of its rooms - you decide to 'tweak' it to see if you can make it better or benefit you more. It all comes crashing down. Just put the keys back on the table, and let GOD be the master of his own house.

You have a point, that the ultimate aim is to dissolve physicality, and liberate sentient beings. But we don't know how long that will take.

So in the meantime, we alleviate suffering in the world, with benevolent engineering.

My flesh does, my spirit doesn't care about it all. It's a predicament. The more the flesh is happy, the less it cares about the spirit. The more the spirit is happy, the less it cares about the flesh.

So if you had a world that provided the flesh with everything it wanted and without any problems, then they don't look towards the spirit.

That's why you'll read in the bible about how hard it is for a rich man to see heaven. A man who has all his fleshly desires accounted for in abundance, will generally not reach out his hand in spirit.

Pretty good.

They must have tunnels, portals and maglevs out of here, right?

Actually flying out might be hard.

But there also must be a rule that they can't stop you.

This central human contradiction can be managed, studied and transcended.

What about the dancer that cleans up the house, showers, and works on a dance routine?

Has she not tempered both the flesh and the spirit?

That's where we differ. It cannot be mastered no matter how great we become as men. It cannot be mastered. You cannot serve two masters. You cannot serve both spirit and flesh.

You are 'serving' neither.

You are aspiring to the spirit, whilst pragmatically accepting that you are partially trapped in matter, for now.

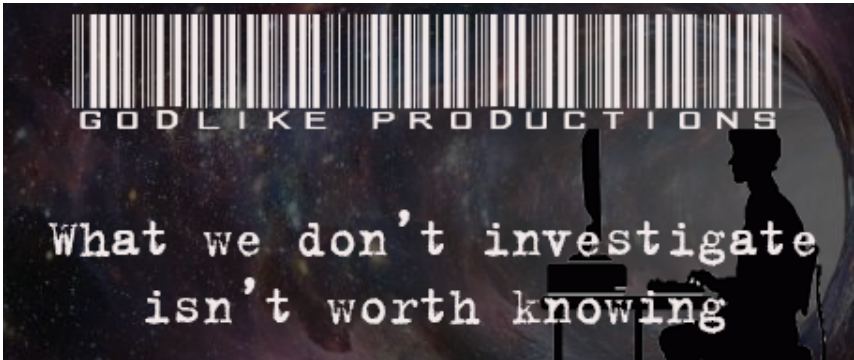

Your high-sounding ideals cannot be resolved in practicality.
